One in three women suffers from pelvic conditions such as incontinence and prolapse, and even more suffer from some form of sexual dysfunction. Enter Stephanie Molden, MD, a skilled urogynecologist, and one of the nation's few board-certified physicians who specializes in female pelvic medicine and reconstructive surgery.

As the director of medicine at the Female Pelvic Health Center, Dr. Molden and her staff focus on treating the "whole woman" in a comfortable and discrete atmosphere. Treatments include cutting-edge therapy and minimally invasive outpatient surgeries for incontinence and prolapse, hormone-balancing therapy to increase energy, aesthetic treatments to help you look as young as you feel and a range of surgical and non-surgical options to improve female sexual function.
